It was an age of soaring power, rampant corruption, extreme elegance, and Devon knew it all intimately. In the elite circles of Washington, where her husband was a trust-busting Senator, at Windsor Castle and dinner with Queen Victoria, in old New York's exclusive Astor Hotel with Keith Curtis, her lover and one of the nation's first millionaires, Devon tasted every pleasure and every scandalous intrigue life could offer. But her heart still burned for the one love she could not possess.
